TRIBUTE TO THE MEN WHO FOUGHT FOR FREEDOM

Chief Justice J. Hay Brown
Lauds Veterans of American Conflicts.

MEMORIAL DAY ORATION

Praise for Pennsylvania Defenders.
John Fulton Reynolds Matchless Commander.

Paying high tribute in glowing words to all American soldiers who fought for the right and for freedom Chief Justice J. Hay Brown of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, delivered the annual Memorial Day address from the rostrum in the National Cemetery this afternoon. In the course of the oration Chief Justice Brown eulogized General John Fulton Reynolds, a Pennsylvanian and a native of Lancaster county, as one of the greatest commanders of the Civil War. He especially called attention to the important role played by soldiers of the Keystone State in 1863 and 1918. In concluding the orator said that serious problems existed today similar to those at the close of the Civil War and advocated a united "striving to adjust the inequalities of life and a teaching by word and deed, the brotherhood of man." Chief Justice Brown said in part:

"One great war in the fullness of time established free government in this Western World; another preserved it. One was for liberty, and after the most heroic of men's recorded struggles the colonies were free; the other was for government and law, and after years lustrous with brave deeds and glorious battles there followed a perfect Union of the States. The one, nearly a century and a half ago, determined that here was Freedom's abiding place; that here her proudest temple should be reared, and here her worshipers should come; the other, in days that we remember, made that temple perfect and bound its worshipers together from ocean to ocean in an everlasting faith in their common country and common destiny. This was accomplished here, and we are at one of earth's holy shrines. We have come to it to place the flowers of May on the graves of the brave men whose precious lives were part of the price paid for cementing the States into an inseparable and imperishable Union. Theirs is a deathless fame. Countless successive harvests may whiten the plain; man, with his ceaseless industry, may alter the aspect of this smiling valley; the face of nature here may change; but these will encamp forever on the slopes where they fought and fell, and in the shadows of the hills which trembled with the shout of their great victory. Through all coming time men will here resort to read aright the great deed which they here performed. From gallant, fearless Reynolds—his youthful brow crowned on this bloody field with Fame's eternal garland—down to the humblest private, who here gave his life for his country, not one shall be forgotten in the records of a grateful nation."

The Sleeping Dead
"This is the Nation's cemetery, and here her beloved dead are sleeping their long last sleep, with her keeping watch over them until they shall awake in the morning; and our tribute to them at this hour is to them as the Nation's soldiers, as reverently sincere for all of them, no matter what state they hailed from, as it is for our own who are resting in their native soil of Pennsylvania. May it not be regarded as out of place if a word of Pennsylvania's part in the struggle for the preservation of the Union be spoken at this spot, second only in her sacred places."

Pennsylvania Heroes
"When the government established by the great struggle of more than a century before was in danger, the strong arm of Pennsylvania was at once raised to protect it. When the echoes from Sumter's guns reached her borders, and the voice of the Chief Magistrate of the nation was heard calling his people to the defense of their imperiled country, no response was more loyal than hers. From all her crowded cities, prosperous towns and thriving hamlets, from all her mines and factories, and from the fields they loved so well to till, her sons went forth from the happy homes of peace to the horrors of war. As it progressed no sacrifice was too great for her and her people, for but one thought inspired them—the preservation of the Federal Union. Of her wealth she gave without stint, her boundless resources were pledged to the support of the general government, and her valiant sons, whether on the tented field, in the rank or file or leading columns, or in the councils of the nation, reflected the full measure of her devotion to the cause in which she was enlisted. Her pride in that conflict is not only in the valor of her soldiers, but in the courage and wisdom of her statesmen. To the War Department she gave her Cameron and her Stanton, who, in their high office, with a just conception of their country's peril, discharged the full measure of their duty in averting it; to the Congress of the nation she sent her Stevens as freedom's matchless champion and oppression's tireless foe, while to all the land went out the inspiration of her loyal and beloved Governor, enshrined forever in the hearts of her people. At no time in that conflict did she falter. The days were dark and her firesides were in agony as hearts were breaking for her dead and dying on every field of battle; brave souls were quailing before the prospect of a shattered Union, and the noblest efforts and most heroic sacrifices of a nation's freemen seemed powerless to stay the destroying hand of the enemy; but the ballots of Pennsylvania in the gloomiest hours of that struggle said to her soldiers upon the field that their cause was just, and to the government that her loyal son and last dollar were pledged to the preservation of the Union.

"In this later struggle Pennsylvania was the only soil of a free State dyed with the blood of a great battle. The invading foe had at last crossed her borders, and for a time her homes were in a devastating track of war. But her free fields were not long defiled. On those slopes and hills of eternal glory the tidal wave of rebellion, surging farther in its northward course, was checked, and against the invincible wall of human fortitude arrayed on Cemetery Ridge, the advancing foe dashed to be forever broken. But when the carnage had ceased, and when the smoke of battle had been lifted, though priceless victory had been won, the people sorrowed for their dead and dying, and for none more keenly than for the most illustrious victim of them all, the highly cherished, dearly loved and gallant son of Pennsylvania, who wore the red rose of Lancaster."

John Fulton Reynolds
"John Fulton Reynolds was a native of Lancaster County, born September 20, 1820, of a family who came to America one hundred and fifty six years ago. On his paternal side he inherited two strains of blood, the Irish and the fainter strain of French Huguenot, not uncommon in Lancaster County, although generally lost in the great volume of German immigration with which it commingled. The father, trained by necessity to the handicraft of the printer and uniting with its exercise the editorial function, as was common then, for sixteen years edited and published at Lancaster a newspaper, which has survived to this day, strengthening with the lapse of time. He was in the widest sense a man of affairs and of public spirit. As editor, legislator and citizen he served the community far more than himself, and sought to promote the public welfare rather than his own interests."

"When in 1861 the necessities of the country called, the son hesitated over no selection of the field of duty; he dallied with no preference for one or another arm of the service, and he counted no chance of promotion and courted no accident of success. Though preferring the artillery, he obeyed without murmur the orders to help organize the infantry branch of the Federal equipment; and to the capacity and thorough drill of the comparatively few trained men like himself, whose services were at the command of the Union cause, was due the rapid organization of the volunteer forces into an efficient soldiery. He joined the army in the field in September of the first year of the war, having been attached to McCull's Division of McDowell's Corps."

"The original orders for him to take command at Fort Hatteras had been changed to secure the larger advantages of the valuable aid he could render in 'setting squadrons in the field.' Governor Curtin, who knew his family and his own soldierly qualities, and who had just pride and interest in promoting the most prompt and thorough organization of that Reserve Corps, which was to become the glory of the State, secured for Reynolds the command of the first brigade. In battle, as in the camp, the class-room or on the march, he proved himself the well-equipped soldier, fearless, but

LARGE MEMORIAL DAY CROWDS HERE

Excursions Bring Throngs to See Impressive Ceremony at Cemetery.

PARADE IS BIG FEATURE

School Children Assist Veterans Decorate Graves of Departed Comrades.

A tremendous crowd of people from all sections of Adams county and from various sections of the eastern United States gathered in Gettysburg today to witness the Memorial Day services. On account of its historical significance Gettysburg has always been one of the most prominent centers of attraction on the day given in honor of the Civil War veterans and hundreds of persons are attracted here annually but to-day the combined facts that parades by soldiers of fifty five years ago will soon be a thing of the past, that the boys of the World War took part in the parade, and that a man of the prominence of Chief Justice J. Hay Brown, of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, was the main speaker of the day seemed to attract an unusual amount of persons who began to throng the streets at an early hour.

The first train arriving in Gettysburg from Highfield on the Western Maryland brought many passengers from the western end of the county as did each succeeding train and by noon the streets of town were fairly jammed with persons. Hotels, restaurants, and soda fountains did a record business and many temporary stands were hastily erected to take care of excess trade.

Contrary to the case of many other years there was no rainfall and the big crowds enjoyed a perfect day.

Before one o'clock the children from Gettysburg schools commenced to line up on Baltimore street as the advance unit of the parade and between 1:30 and 2:00 o'clock marched off to the National Cemetery ahead of the main parade.

At the time the school children were on their way to the cemetery the main part of the parade was forming in Center Square under the direction of Chief Marshal Henry Stewart and his aid, Lieutenant Clyde Bream. After spending about one-half hour in getting into line the parade marched off to the cemetery headed by the Gettysburg band.

United States Army and Navy were both represented in the parade but the feature of the whole procession, of course, were the stately figures of the old veterans who rode in automobiles and attracted the greatest amount of attention.

After the main parade arrived in the National Cemetery the school children and old soldiers carried out their beautiful ceremony of strewing flowers over the graves of the veterans who fell here during the war while the band played a funeral dirge.

Following the grave decorating ceremony the crowd assembled at the rostrum where Rev. F. H. Brunstetter, pastor of the Methodist church here, delivered the invocation. Rev. F. E. Taylor, Presbyterian minister, read Lincoln's Gettysburg address and then Chief Justice J. Hay Brown delivered his oration. Rev. W. R. Glen, of the United Brethren church, pronounced the benediction at the conclusion of Chief Justice Brown's speech.

LARGE CROWDS AT COUNTY MATINEES

Three Thousand See Exciting Finishes at York Springs. Hunterstown Meet here.

THREE FIGURE IN MISHAP

Senator Wise Throws John L. R. While Jockeying for Position. Tracks in Good Condition.

Horse racing on two Adams county tracks were the main attraction for the Ascension Day crowds. Throngs estimated at 3,000 gathered at the Grist Park at York Springs and many were present at the meeting of the Hunterstown Trotting Association held on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Club near Gettysburg.

In the Class B race at the Gentlemen's Driving Club while getting ready for the start of the second heat Senator Wise, driven by Reuben Slentz collided with John L. R. throwing the horse to the ground. Both drivers escaped without serious injury. The wheel of the sulky of Jesse Millhimes, of Hunterstown, was broken in the mix up involving three horses and drivers.

The feature of the day was the Class B race which took five heats to decide the winner. Lizzie R. finally won out in an exciting heat when she nosed out John L. R. The Class C race was won in straight heats by Justa Gui, owned by the Gettysburg Driving Club. Owing to a lack of entries the Class A race was cancelled.

WILL ANNOUNCE DETOURS WEEKLY

State Highway Department will Make Public Location of By-Roads.

ENGINEERS CO-OPERATE

Reports of Interest to Adams County People Because of Large Road Building Program Started.

Because of the great number of detours made necessary through the unprecedented amount of road construction now under way, the State Highway Department, it was announced to-day, each week will make public through the newspapers a list of all existing detours and their locations.

The large road building program planned by the Highway Commission for Adams county will be eagerly awaited by the people of this section. With one stretch of more than five miles already under way and the fact that two other county road contracts will be awarded in the course of a month it is necessary for everyone to know the locations of the side roads to be followed.

Some confusion has already resulted from the Straban road being closed while the building is going on and other detours will be necessary as the work progresses. The Adams county authorities have been asked by Commissioner Sadler to aid in making convenient detours in this district and to put up signs and markers so that people can find the roads. He said unless there was co-operation there would be much dissatisfaction.

Assistant State Highway Commissioner George H. Biles has instructed the fifteen District Engineers in Pennsylvania to file with the Department each week complete information concerning every detour in their District. In his letter to the Engineers Mr. Biles said:

"The placing, marking, maintenance and advertisement of detours is a subject of vital importance to the public. It calls for the application of a more comprehensive and systematic plan of handling. It is of great importance at this time and contributes to the success of our efforts. Complete co-operation must be had from all persons connected with the State Highway Department."

Beginning Monday, June 9, the State Highway Bureau of Information will furnish to all the daily newspapers in Pennsylvania information of the following description: Location of detours; description and conditions of detours (whether State Highway, State-aid, township or private road); the approximate date detour was placed or is to be placed, approximate date detour is to be removed.

The various Engineers in making their reports will also furnish information of a more general description concerning their detours. Post card reports are to be made to the State Highway Department each week and a large map has been prepared in the Department offices of Harrisburg on which the various detours will be outlined. It will be possible for motorists or automobile travelers, if they will clip the daily newspapers of each Monday, to secure adequate information concerning all detours in the State. The Bureau of Information will also supply detour data to the motor clubs of Pennsylvania, many of which are preparing to place special bulletin boards in their headquarters. Motor Clubs in cities of other States on trans-continental Highway routes will also be supplied with this information.

The Department has placed an order for a large number of metal detour signs which are to be used instead of the heavy cards which have heretofore marked detours. These metal signs will point the proper road in an unmistakable manner.

VILLA PROCLAIMS NEW GOVERNMENT

Situation Serious for Carranza. Washington is Awaiting Results.

ANGELES TO BE LEADER

Americans will be Protected. Situation Full of Possibilities. Clash is Looked for.

Washington, May 30—Villa forces have proclaimed General Felipe Angeles provisional president of Mexico and Villa himself secretary of war.

The move coming at the climax of military operations considered by the Carranza government so serious that it has asked the United States for permission to move troops through Texas, New Mexico and Arizona is regarded here as reflecting a situation more serious in Mexico than any since the triumph of Carranza forces over Villa three years ago. Viewed in connection with the activities of the Federal forces in Southern Mexico the situation is regarded as full of possibilities.

Washington Waits
American government officials are refusing to comment on the news until they receive official confirmation. Their seems, however, to be no doubt of its authenticity.

Angeles' reported first proclamation announcing that Americans in Mexico would be protected is particularly interesting to officials here, coming as it does on the heels of the refusal of the State Department to grant Carranza's request that he be allowed to move troops through American territory for the purpose of protecting Americans in Chihuahua. Acting Secretary Polk announced Thursday he had notified the Mexican government he could not grant the request made unless assurances could be given that Americans would be afforded protection while the troops were in transit. That this could not be done had been admitted previously by the Mexican authorities. Governor Hobby, of Texas, declined to authorize the passage of Mexican troops through Texas without guarantees of protection to Americans and so notified the State Department.

A Good Selection
Felipe Angeles is well-known to American officials through his services to the French government during the European War as inspector of munitions in the United States. He is held in high esteem by the French government, and was considered by the United States government, at the time of the Niagara Falls conference, the best selection for the Mexican presidency. At this conference the names were agreed upon by the representatives of the various Mexican factions and the United States as suitable presidential choice. Angeles' name headed that list.

Angeles is about 45 years old and is a full-blooded Mexican Indian, as were Porfirio Diaz and Huerta. He is a graduate of Chapultepec Military Academy, the "West Point of Mexico," and of the St. Cyr Artillery School in France. He was head of Chapultepec under Madero, who chose Angeles to go to Morelos and conduct the campaign against Zapata.

We notice in the papers that the graves of the 70,000 American soldiers who are buried in France will be decorated on Memorial Day. The death of those soldiers and the 22,000 who died from influenza and other diseases in the camps in this country have made many sad homes.

CZAR OF RUSSIA MAY NOT BE DEAD

Paris Paper Raises Question. Occasional News that Ruler Still Lives.

Paris, May 30—"Is the Czar of Russia really dead?" asks Le Temps. And no wonder, for his and his family's death has been so often asserted by "trustworthy" eye-witnesses and just as often "reliably" denied, that the fate of the dethroned Romanoff autocrat and his wife and children has come to be a puzzle that none seem to be able to solve.

The only one among the many who were inclined to express their belief in the correctness of the affirmative answer to that question was King Alfonso, of Spain, whose war inquiry bureau, privately but very effectively conducted by him, to make sure of the whereabouts of missing men and women during the war, gave out repeatedly the information that the Czar and his folk, so far from being dead, had been located and that the Czarina and her children even were expected to arrive in Spain, where shelter and safe abode had been prepared for them at San Sebastian.

It Is Very Indefinite

And now Le Temps hears from its Berlin correspondent that he has been the recipient of reports regarding the imperial family from two different sources and by a most remarkable coincidence. The correspondent declines to name his sources or any particulars about them, save to the extent of saying that the news came to him, on the one hand, from what might be termed former court circles, while his other informant, until the Bolshevik terror began, was the owner of large estates in Russia which the Czar is said to have visited frequently before his abdication.

The news itself is scanty enough, indeed. There are said to be obvious reasons for its being so. This is the information: The Czar is alive and well, and it is added that no member of his immediate family has perished. In one case the actual place of Czar Nicholas' residence is stated as being known. It will be understood why nothing could be added to this particular item. That much seems admissible, that the place is far removed from Bolshevik interference or outrage, but from which for the moment there is no change of escape.

GERMAN OFFER IS RECEIVED

Volume of 146 Pages Containing Counter Proposals Delivered to Allies.

AUSTRIA ON WAITING LIST

Translations of Message will be Sent Later. Complete Treaty Saturday. Wilson and Orlando Agree.

Versailles, May 30—Baron von Lersner, of the German delegation, informally delivered the completed counter-proposals to Colonel Henry the French liaison officer, at 12:20 o'clock Thursday. Germans explained that there had been no time for translations, which would be sent later.

The volume containing the counter-proposals is not bound, corner fasteners holding together the 146 pages.

The German delegation presented only three copies of the counter-proposals to the secretariat of the Peace Conference. Twenty interpreters were busy to-day translating the document from German into English and French.

Paris, May 30—The German reply is written in German and bears the caption: "Observations of the German Delegation on the Conditions of Peace."

When the Peace Conference met in plenary session Thursday afternoon to hear the Austrian peace terms, it was announced that the treaty had not yet been completed. It was decided therefore, to postpone the session until Saturday, when the completed treaty was expected to be ready.

Another reason for postponement of the plenary session was a request from the smaller powers, especially the Balkan States, that they be allowed further time to consider the terms.

M. Bratinai was spokesman, not only for Rumania, but for the other Balkan states represented, in asking for a postponement of the session.

Dr. Karl Renner, head of the Austrian delegation, was notified that the Peace Treaty will be communicated on Monday. He offered no objection to this.

The Temps says today that an agreement has virtually been reached on the Adriatic question and that President Wilson, who saw the Jugoslav delegation to-day, has given his consent to the arrangement, which Premier Orlando of Italy has accepted.

According to the Temps the essential points in the agreement are:

1. Fiume, not including the suburb of Sakhak, forms with the region to the west an independent state under the League of Nations. This state will be bounded by Italian territory and contain the railroad from Fiume to Laibach.

2. Zara (capital of Dalmatia) and Sebenico (70 miles southeast of Trieste on the Adriatic) will be placed under the sovereignty of Italy, which renounces any other part of the Dalmatian Coast and hinterland.

3. Italy will exercise sovereignty over islands called strategic, namely Cherso (12 miles southwest of Fiume, belonging to Istria), Lussin (southwest of Cherso and also Istrian) and Lissa (33 miles southwest of Spalato) in the Adriatic, belonging to Dalmatia) with the outlying islands.

Furthermore, says the Temps, the League of Nations grants Italy the mandate over Albania, where the Treaty of London assured Italy preponderant influence.

KING GEORGE WILL GREET AIR MEN

Crews of American Seaplane Tendered Official Reception in London.

Plymouth, May 30—President Wilson has summoned the crew of the NC-4 to proceed as speedily as possible from Plymouth to Paris, it was announced here to-day. He desires them to attend the aviation conference in Paris.

The crews of the NC-3 and 1 will also proceed to Paris after a visit to London, where they will be given an official reception and will be presented to the King.

It is presumed here that the crews of the American seaplanes have been called to Paris to give experts the benefit of the knowledge gained from their flight.

The program of entertainment which has been planned here in honor of the crew of the NC-4 when they arrive from Lisbon will embrace the meeting of the incoming seaplane by British seaplanes, a salute with very lights and an escort to the landing place near the U. S. S. Rochester and Amoskock, which the American fliers will board immediately.

This civic welcome will be left until the following morning. Then the Americans will be taken to the Mayflower landing, where, in the presence of a British naval, military and air force contingent, a formal reception will be accorded by the Mayor and the municipal authorities. This will be followed by a luncheon tendered by the Royal Air Force.

It is assumed that the Americans will leave for Paris immediately, but if they are able to remain in Plymouth for the night they will be further entertained.

cool, untiring but ever considerate, brave as he was foresighted, determined as he was impetuous. At Mechanicsville it was his skillful disposition of the guns and his personal direction that enabled the two brigades engaged to maintain their position in Beaver Dam Creek against every onset of the enemy, and to beat him back again and again without the loss of any advantage by the Federal forces.

"To the troops immediately engaged in this and succeeding battles the example of Reynolds, riding fearlessly to the front with waving sword, was an inspiring spectacle, and to the country at large his personal prowess early marked him as a subject of popular adulation. His superiors in command saw in his skillful management of situations, as well as his disposition of guns and men, the broader qualities that distinguished the great commander. At Gaines' Mill next day, when the Union lines were broken, with two strong companions Reynolds was cut off from his command, made prisoner, sent to Richmond and kept there for several weeks until, at the solicitation of the civil authorities of Fredericksburg, whose military governor he had been and who afterwards mourned his death as if he had been one of their own people, he was released. He was exchanged for Gen. Barksdale, who with him died at Gettysburg.

"A year ago agony was at the hearthstones of the country. Gloom had settled over the face of the earth, and hope for universal freedom and government by the people seemed for a season to have bidden the world farewell, as it was being scourged by savage hordes. They have been scattered, the clouds of war have been lifted and the menace of the world's peace and happiness has been crushed, let us hope forever; but these results have been attained through the costliest sacrifices in human history, and we have paid our toll in graves across the sea. The young manhood of the United States, with the loftiest patriotism, with love of country as strong and pure as love of home, as intense upon the field of battle as in defense of the hearth, became the potential part of the victorious armies of the Allies; but many of them will never come back. When they left home and loved ones they knew well what their going meant. They went to offer their lives willing sacrifices, if need be, in as holy a cause as ever called for the sword of battle, and as they left each went inspired by the spirit of England's sweet young singer, who sang just before he became a soldier in her service:

"If I should die, think only this of me:

That there's some corner of a foreign field
That is forever England. There shall be
In that rich earth a richer dust concealed;
A dust whom England bore, shaped, made aware,
Gave, once, her flowers to love, her ways to roam,
A body of England's breathing English air,
Washed by the rivers, blest by the suns of home."

World War Heroes

"Let us pause for a moment and think of those corners in foreign fields that are forever American. While we cannot strew flowers there, our hearts are there, and there the loving care of a grateful nation will be through all the years to come.

"Serious problems are confronting us. Though they relate to peace they are no less momentous than those created by war, and the weal or woe of mankind will follow their solution. Let each of us, as best he can, aid in their proper solution. The world is restless. Let us all help to make it peaceful by striving to adjust the inequalities of life and by teaching by word and deed the brotherhood of man. However, we may honestly differ among ourselves as to what the terms and conditions of officially declared peace ought to be, the consuming thought and devout prayer common to us all are that they shall establish lasting peace—peace, prosperity and happiness to all men for all time; and let us have faith to believe that such peace is before us, to be maintained by the supremacy of the law, and let us not be hopeless as we say one to the other:

"But we grow old. Ah! when shall all men's good
Be each man's rule, and universal peace
Lie like a shaft of light across the land,
And like a lane of beams athwart the sea,
Thro' all the circle of the golden years?"

UNCLE SAM TO BE SCHOOLMASTER

Will Instruct 200,000 Khaki-Clad Pupils. Big Undertaking.

NEED MANY EDUCATORS

General Rees to Direct Work. Schools Established Where Warranted. High School in Each Division.

Paris, May 30.—Uncle Sam is now a fully certified schoolmaster with about 200,000 khaki-clad pupils. This is the result of the establishment of the Educational Corps of the United States army to provide training for vocations and academic instruction for young men in the army.

The Educational Corps is under the direction of Brigadier General Robert I. Rees, who militarized the American colleges last fall. Under him is an executive commission of three educators, Dr. Frank E. Spaulding, Superintendent of Schools in Cleveland; Dr. John Erskine, Professor of English at Columbia; and Dr. Kenyon L. Butterfield, President of the Massachusetts Agricultural College. In all about 7,500 instructors, including a number of men of high standing in American education, are teaching the American soldiers the way to progress. Everything from a, b, c to university subjects and from stenography to engineering is included within the curriculum of this great and unique college.

The army schools were in full operation by January, equipped with $1,500 worth of books specially ordered from America and provided in part by the American Library Association. But there has been a shortage of books and often one book has had to serve for a whole class.

Many hundreds of army schools have been established throughout France wherever there are enough American soldiers to warrant. General Pershing's order required a post school in every place where 500 or more men were stationed and as the schools had to be opened at once all sorts of queer places, from cafes to monasteries, were used as schoolrooms, until regular quarters could be provided. The soldiers are studying in barns, stable lofts, aerodromes, army barracks and in one case in a convent. Meantime the army is endeavoring to provide adequate quarters and sufficient books for its 200,000 students. In cities like Coblenz, the city school buildings are used without interfering with the regular school life of the children.

These post schools may be termed the primary schools of the army educational system, though this is incorrect as in many of these schools more advanced education is being given to officers and men who are unable to leave their posts and attend the divisional schools or the university. The men attend these post schools after their regular day's work.

Then every division has a high school centrally located with better accommodations. Some 30,000 men are attending such high schools. Then comes the big army university at Beaune which will accommodate many thousands of students. Besides there are about 3,000 officers and men attending French universities who have hospitably thrown open their doors to their American friends and 2,000 men are in English universities. These universities students are all men who have had at least the equivalent of two years in college.

Obviously few men can be detached from their own units to attend these universities but the post school does not interfere with military work, but is available to every soldier and thus has an important place in the educational system.

The breadth of the work in the post schools being done is astounding. Men who cannot read or write are to be found studying in the same room with college graduates who are working for advanced degrees. There is a chance for everybody. The list of subjects taught would fill a book but here are a few to illustrate: Algebra, calculus, geometry, trigonometry.

GETS LIMIT FINE OF $500

"Frankness Should Not Go Unrewarded," Is Comment of Court in Soaking Suspect.

Kansas City, Mo. — "Frankness should not go unrewarded," said Judge Edward Fleming of the South municipal court as he fined Claude Simpson $500, the limit. Simpson was arrested while standing in front of a saloon by a patrolman who saw part of a "jimmy" protruding from Simpson's pocket.

Simpson, who is unemployed, admitted he intended to break into the saloon. After learning his fine Simpson said he was glad he was arrested before he entered the saloon, as he then would have faced a penitentiary sentence.

"Judge," he said, "it's just as well to look on the bright side of things." "Some Pollyanna," remarked the judge.

Flag of Denmark.

The national emblem of Denmark, which is the oldest in existence, dating back to the thirteenth century, was born of war, and the legend is traceable to the fact. In a battle between the Danes and the heathen Livonians, King Waldemar declared that he saw a cross in the sky. The news was communicated to his troops, with the assurance that the portent was the sign of celestial aid. The cross forthwith became the national emblem, "The Dannebrog," strength of Denmark, as it was called.

SPORTING COLUMN

Third Ward made their first appearance of the season on Nixon Field, Thursday evening, and were defeated by the First Ward in a loosely played contest by the score of 7-3.

Timely hitting by First Ward coupled with frequent errors and occasional bases on balls enabled them to reach the total of seven runs. Hartzell was extremely effective with men on bases and fanned ten men in the seven innings.

Although defeated, Third Ward demonstrated that they have the nucleus of a club which could make a good showing in the league if some of the weaker players were replaced with more experienced men.

Stevens pitched better ball than the score against him indicates.

In order that the many fight fans in Adams County who are keenly interested in the coming Willard-Dempsey championship contest may have inside information concerning the training and progress of both champion and challenger the Gettysburg Times has subscribed to the Toledo Blade which is the leading newspaper in the city where the fight will be held on July 4th.

Efforts of the Toledo sporting writers were largely responsible for having Tex Richard, promoter of the contest, select Toledo as the site of the bout and the Toledo Blade will send its best writers to the training camp every day to report the training activities of Dempsey and also Willard when he arrives in camp.

George R. Pulford, leading sporting writer of the Blade, is ranked among the best in the Middle West and will give readers of the Times the same information concerning Willard and Dempsey as if one of the Times staff men were on the scene of the fight.

The first article from the Blade says that Jack Kearns, manager of Dempsey, is in favor of having a group of sporting writers choose the referee for the contest. Kearns says:

"I don't care who referees the championship if he is honest, knows his business, is experienced and has the nerve to throw either one or both of them out of the ring if they do not do what they are paid for doing."

"I don't want to see a man in there who is afraid to make them both go to it and keep on going to it. The job is one that requires a man of wide experience, because if Willard elects to loaf, and put up a defensive bout, making Jack do all the work, it's going to be a bun show and the public doesn't want that neither do I."

"Neither do I want a man in there who hasn't the nerve to throw either one out of the ring if he persists in stalling and hanging on. I don't intend to have Willard hanging onto Jack all the time. You know hanging on is a foul but how many referees are there who would have the nerve to disqualify Willard if he persists in grabbing Jack and lying all over him?"

"I don't want to win the title on a foul, nor do I want to lose on a foul. I want to see a good, clean, hard battle, with the best man winning. I want Jack to knock him out and that's what will happen if Willard will stand up and play the part of a champion."

"So far as I am concerned, I am perfectly willing to pick out a number of sporting writers and let them select the referee. That's how much I care about who handles the job. I know the sporting editors would select a man with the nerve to enforce the rules and no one who feared the weight of public opinion."

Four-year-old John R. McLean, new $100,000,000 boy: his mother, Mrs. Edward B. McLean, wearing the Hope diamond of sinister reputation, and below, the nine-year-old brother who was killed by a Ford automobile when he escaped the guards at the McLeans' Washington home, picked to protect him from kidnappers or accident. Little John falls heir to the fortune that was his brother's.

Thirty two members of the Naval Academy base ball squad have left Annapolis for West Point where the two great rivals will meet in their first diamond contest since before the war. Both teams have had an excellent season and there is little to choose between them although Annapolis is especially confident after their 17-3 victory over Ursinus on Wednesday.

Saturday is a big day in Annapolis athletic circles as their unbeaten crew will row against University of Pennsylvania on the Schuylkill river.

RHEUMATISM

Physician Believes a Genuine Remedy for the Disease Has Been Found.

Rheuma, the wonderful Rheumatism remedy sold by People's Drug Store and all druggists, gives quicker and more lasting relief than other remedies costing many times as much. Rheuma passes the deadly poisonous secretions into the bowels and kidneys, from which they are quickly thrown off in a natural healthy way.

Read what a reputable physician says about Rheuma: "I have made a most careful investigation of the formula employed in the manufacture of Rheuma, and I heartily recommend it as a remedy for all forms of rheumatism. I find they are far in advance of the methods generally employed in the treatment of rheumatism, and altogether different in composition from the remedies usually prescribed."—Dr. M. C. Lyons.

This should give any sufferer from rheumatism confidence to try Rheuma.

James Russell Lowell's first wife, Maria White Lowell, was also a poet. A small collection of her verses, printed privately by Lowell in 1855, two years after her death, is now almost forgotten. One copy of it is preserved in the archives of the New York public library. She was the daughter of a farmer in Watertown, Mass. In letters to a friend, when Lowell was first getting acquainted with Maria, he said: "She knows more poetry than anyone I know."

EXTREME ENGLISH CUT PANTS UNPOPULAR WITH THIS LAD

Forrest E. Keeling of Bloomington, Ind., star track athlete of Indiana university, and picked to win the broad-jump in the Big Ten conference track and field meet at Chicago, has what trainers call "jumper's leg." So much has Keeling used his right leg to a point where it is out of proportion to the left. By using this master-leg Keeling a year ago was enabled to hurdle over 22 feet 7 1/2 inches of real estate in a conference meet at Northwestern, and track fans look for him to set a new record this year. Yet Keeling can jump only nineteen feet—the jump of a mediocre high school athlete—with his under-developed left leg.

HOUSE DEFEATS QUARANTINE BILL

Health Measure to Prevent Outbreak of Contagious Disease Lacks Fourteen Votes.

The Department of Health bill, enlarging powers in quarantines in contagious disease outbreaks and designed to meet such conditions as arose during the influenza outbreak, was defeated at the afternoon session. The bill lacked 14 votes of a majority and it was reported that an effort would be made to reconsider the measure.

The bill creating the new State Department of Conservation was amended to take effect on January 1 by Chairman Baldrige, of the game committee.

The House then cleared its second reading calendar, among the bills passed being the emergency salary appropriation of $350,000 for the State government and the series of bills presented for the Auditor General. The Insurance Department reorganizer was laid over.

The Wallace landlord and tenant bill was reported and with several amendments including provision for a law, after a hearing at which real estate men from several cities appeared in opposition to the measure.

The Rinn grade crossing bill was postponed for the third time by the committee on manufactures.

The tractor bill was given an extensive hearing by the road committee, at which Highways Commissioner Sadler discussed the proposed regulatory features with representatives of farmers tractor owners and agents.

Among the bills passed at the afternoon session were:

Removing protection from red squirrels and advancing the season so that black birds may be hunted in summer.

Amending borough code to provide a method whereby charters can be surrendered.

Fixing salary of deputy commissioner of health at $6,500.

Fixing salaries of controller in boroughs according to population.

Validating municipal liens in boroughs.

Regulating informations in desertion and non-support cases before aldermen and justices of the peace in Allegheny county.

Providing for payment of fines collected from aliens for possessing firearms and dogs to the State Game Commission.

DYING MAN WRITES

Names of Slayers. Two Men are Arrested.

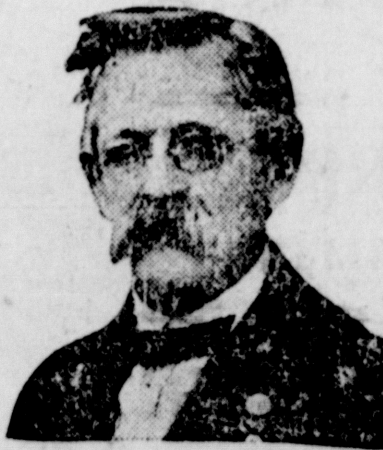

Lancaster, Pa., May 30—With the words "Frank Capp, Pietro Scritto, work in hotel," scribbled by a dying man in a freight car, the police are working on the only clew which led to the arrest of two men who are believed to have been the murderers of Bruno Trotiano, who was found bleeding to death on the Port Deposit Railroad, near York Furnace. He had been shot in the stomach.

A freight train was stopped and Trotiano taken to the Columbia Hospital, but he died before reaching the institution. The two men who were with him when last seen were Frank Capp and Pietro Scritto, both of this city, and they were taken into custody late Thursday afternoon. When surrounded by the police they made a desperate attempt to escape, but were run down after a chase.

Both denied any knowledge of how the murdered man came by his death, but both showed signs of having been in a fight. Capp is said to have served a term in the Huntingdon Reformatory for larceny.

MOYER SAYS TWAS NEIGHBOR TOLD HER

A. M. Moyer, 312 North Horton street, Philadelphia, speaking for his wife, says that it was through a neighbor that she heard about Tanlac. "She suffered from stomach trouble and belching of gas and had considerable pain and distress. Her appetite was very uncertain and she had a nervous internal condition. She has taken several bottles of Tanlac and found relief from almost the first dose. The gas has stopped forming and all the disagreeable symptoms have disappeared. Her appetite has become normal and she hardly knows what nerves are now. Tanlac has proved a great thing for her."

The genuine J. I. Gore Co. Tanlac is sold here by People's Drug Store and other leading druggists in every community.

ONTARIO'S CHAIN-O-LAKES ATTRACTS ARMY OF ANGLERS

French River, Nipigon, Lake-of-the-Woods, Ontario. These are names that rouse enthusiasm in the breasts of a great number of American fishermen who cross over to Canada every year for a season of soul-satisfying sport.

French River, the easternmost point of this trip, is an eight-hour journey north of Toronto on the Canadian Pacific's Toronto-Sudbury branch. Companies of fishermen march against it from three directions, for it may be reached from Montreal and Toronto or Buffalo and Detroit. French River is in reality a sixty-mile chain of small lakes reaching from Lake Nipissing on the east to Georgian Bay on the west, every mile of which affords good sport. A number of fishing clubs, American and Canadian, maintain club houses in this district. But it is not necessary to be a member of such a club to find good accommodations. Cabin type hotels and tent camps insure visiting sportsmen the sort of housing and cuisine that is in keeping with life in the wilds.

Lake Nipigon, due north of the northernmost point of Lake Superior, has been set aside with the land for twenty miles around it by the Ontario government as a federal reserve. This means that the sporting possibilities of this district will be preserved for the public for all time to come. The scenery about Lake Nipigon and its adjacent streams is beautiful and Nipigon trout fishing is conceded to be the best in the world. The Nipigon region is particularly popular with sportsmen of the middle states, although many fishermen from the east and west coasts gladly make the long journey for the sake of excellent fishing. Lake-of-the-Woods is the western most of Ontario's wealth of fishing districts and the largest body of water between Lake Superior and the Pacific. Kenora, a popular summer resort, is the gateway of Lake-of-the-Woods and the adjacent districts of Rainy Lake and Seine River, all famous among the fishing fraternity. Lake-of-the-Woods is dotted with pretty islands and its resorts and hotels are popular with summer tourists who demand comfort with their outings. However, sportsmen need not worry about being bothered by summer guests as the 3,000 square miles of Lake-of-the-Woods afford ample opportunities for private camps in splendid isolation.

French River is noted for its bass and maskinonge; Nipigon for speckled trout; Lake-of-the-Woods offers a variety of fish, including pickerel, maskinonge, jackfish, bass and trout.

HELD ON SIX CHARGES

Hanover Boy Held for Grand Jury Action.

Charles Heiner, 19 years old, Hanover, was held for the action of the York county grand jury on six charges following a hearing before Justice of the Peace Lewis D. Sell Wednesday morning. Five of the charges are robbery and the other is carrying deadly weapons.

Heiner was arrested Tuesday, May 20, by Chief of Police Crabbs and since that time six warrants have been served on him. John Staley, Hanover, charges the boy with the theft of a bicycle. Detective Frank Boreman, representing the Pennsylvania Railroad, charges Heiner with robbing the chewing gum and Bell telephone boxes at Union Station on April 28, last, and with the theft of a half barrel of beer from a car which was standing on a siding there. Jacob Rudisill, Gitts Run, swore out a warrant charging him with entering his cellar on Saturday, April 17, and stealing pies, bread, bologna and canned goods. Two warrants sworn out by Chief of Police Crabbs charge the boy with entering the summer home of the Rev. Abner S. Dechant, in the Pigeon Hills, and with carrying concealed weapons.

The Lewistown Board of Health has decreed that all fish stands must be removed from the curbs during the hot months.

Duncannon farmers are planning the formation of a garage.

NEW BOUNTY LAW EFFECTIVE JUNE 1

Act Provides Increased Reward for Killing Wild Cats, Foxes and Weasels.

After June 1 of this year a new bounty law will go into effect in Pennsylvania. The House Bill gives the Board of Game Commissioners authority to issue checks direct to the claimants for bounty. Under its provision a bounty of $8 will be paid for wild cats, $1 for mink and $2 each for foxes and weasels.

The skins of all animals for the killing of which a bounty is claimed must be sent to the State Game office by the claimant following the same procedure as at present before a justice of the peace. The skin must not be mutilated and the affidavit must clearly state when and where the animal in question was killed if the claimant hopes to profit by the killing.

Special deputy game protectors are authorized by the act to take affidavits and are entitled to the same fee as the justice would claim. A paid game protector is not entitled to such fee. All individuals in the State authorized to administer such oaths can take the affidavit.

Any effort to secure the increased bounty on either a wild cat or a weasel as provided by the Act through the presentation of the skin of an animal killed before June 1, is punishable by a fine and imprisonment and a false affidavit in this regard is perjury.

LINCOLN WAY MARKERS

Enameled Steel Signs to be Placed Along Route.

The Lincoln Highway is permanently marked with enameled steel signs set on steel posts from San Francisco to Omaha, Nebraska, a distance of over 1,900 miles. The Association is endeavoring to replace the old marking system of painting the Lincoln Highway insignia on the telegraph poles with these permanent steel markers as rapidly as possible, and hopes to complete the job from Omaha to Pittsburgh next year with the support of the local communities. Those sections of the route which are still marked with the painted markers will require repainting this spring and many of the communities along the line between Omaha and New York are already taking steps to repaint the markers which have become faded from the weather.

Allen County, Indiana, has already thoroughly marked the Lincoln Highway within its boundaries, and the other counties of that progressive state are expected to repaint their Lincoln Highway markers before the flood of early summer touring begins.
